

STABS FLEEING MAN IN THE BACK AND KILLS HIM

Stephen Mottskoff Unwary by Pistol Shots in Running Street Fight.

Police Officer Muller and Carr were standing at First avenue and One Hundred and Fourteenth street early today when they heard shouts and hurried footsteps up the avenue. A man was running toward them at the top of his speed waving a small revolver in his right hand. Close behind him was a pursuer, a taller, broader man, who gained on him at every step. Behind this man, in turn, were two others.

As the first man neared the patrolmen he waved his revolver in the air and fired three times, apparently in an effort to shake off his pursuers. It was a vain effort. The second man got within striking distance of him. He pulled a long knife. Three times the knife rose and fell as the big man drove it into his victim's back.

All this the patrolmen had seen in the few seconds that it took for them to draw their own weapons and start forward. The stabbed man dropped on his face almost at their feet, crying out something in Italian. His limbs twitched for a moment and then stiffened out.

Satisfied with his work, the tall man turned and fled. The two who had brought up the rear of the procession were evidently his companions, for they also faced about and ran with him. Firing their revolvers at intervals, the patrolmen chased the trio north to One Hundred and Sixteenth street, then west to Second avenue, and back around to First avenue and One Hundred and Fifteenth street, one block from where the stabbing had occurred. Their revolvers were empty when they drove the winded fugitives to cover in a doorway. Two of them—the two who had taken no part in the running—surrendered readily. The tall fellow fought hard. Muller's night stick slapped his knife out of his hand and then he used his fists until they clubbed him into a daze.

The patrolmen led their prisoners to where a little group had gathered about the fallen man. He appeared to be dead, but on the chance that life might linger in the carved-up frame the policeman took him to St. Michael's Hospital. The surgeon pronounced the man dead. He found in the body three deep knife wounds and a hole behind the ear that might have come either from a stab or a pistol bullet. The dead man was stout, dark and heavily dressed.

The man who killed him gave the name of Stephen Mottskoff, twenty-six years old. The others were his younger brother, Meyer Mottskoff, and Samuel Mottskoff, aged eighteen. All three were laborers and all three resided at the same address—No. 82 East One Hundred and Sixty-first street.

The patrolmen learned subsequently that there had been a row at a Bohemian hall near One Hundred and Seventeenth street and Pleasant avenue, and that the two Mottskoffs and Muller had chased away a fourth man. This fourth man was the man whom the tall fellow subsequently killed. Later he was identified as Angelo Gallio, a barber, of No. 231 First avenue.

In the Harlem Police Court the three prisoners were remanded to the Coroner without bond.

SHOT THROUGH PANE NEAR SLEEPING GIRL

Bullet Falls on Bed After Striking Wall Over Miss
Mulholland.

A quiet investigation is on foot in Jamaica to discover, if possible, the identity of a person who fired a shot early today into a room in the home of John P. Farrell, at Fleet and Washington street, in which his niece, Margaret Mulholland, was sleeping. The bullet struck the wall above her bed and dropped on the coverlet.

The sound of the pistol shot and the tinkling of breaking glass as the bullet smashed through the window of Miss Mulholland's room awakened scores of persons. Miss Mulholland ran to the window and looked out, but there was no one in sight.

The young woman at whom the mysterious attack appears to have been directed is socially prominent in Jamaica. Her engagement to William V. Bedell, one of the most popular young men in that section of the city, has been announced.

Mr. Farrell believes the shot was fired wildly by some midnight reveler, who took to his heels as soon as he found it had reached a mark. Miss Mulholland has no enemies and there appears to be no reason why any one should seek to annoy her. The bullet was fired from a .32-caliber revolver, and the person who fired it stood at Fleet and Washington streets, diagonally opposite Mr. Farrell's home.

The "Debs Red Special," consisting of a day coach, combination car and baggage car, left the Grand Central Depot this morning at 6 o'clock for Boston with Eugene V. Debs and his party aboard. They were at the Grand Union Hotel over night. Accompanying Mr. Debs were Stanley J. Clark, of Texas; J. C. Lapworth, of London; George B. Miller, of Denver; and Seymour Shidman, of Chicago.

SET FIRE UNDER BIG TENEMENT TO HIDE THEFT

Burglar Stole Barber's Tools,
Then Kindled Blaze That Imperilled Many.

To conceal a small robbery a burglar set fire to a big six-story, double-deck tenement-house at 4 A. M. today at No. 123 Amsterdam avenue.

The burglar entered the barber shop of Louis Marino on the ground floor, using a duplicate key in the front door, and, after helping himself to the barber tools, went to a rear room and put a torch to a bed.

Marino, who lives on the second floor with his family, detected smoke and went down to the shop to investigate. He found the place blazing, and his cries of "Fire!" awakened the other tenants in the house, many of whom took to the fire-escapes and the roof.

Policeman Alder, of the West One Hundred and Fifty-second street station, sent in a call for the engine and the firemen made short work of the blaze. The loss was about $200.

Marino told the police he suspected a discharged employee, and a search is being made for the man.

Charles J. Hewitt Wins Nomination From Race Track Senator With Woodruff's Aid.

SYRACUSE, Oct. 5.—Charles J. Hewitt, of Locke, Cayuga County, was today nominated for Senator by the Republicans of the Fourth District. The convention had been in deadlock for a week, unable to agree upon a chairman. Cayuga County supported for the nomination of Senator Benjamin Wilcox, of Cortland and Seneca were for Rowland L. Davis, of Cortland. Both candidates last week released their followers.

Timothy L. Woodruff, chairman of the Republican State Committee, arrived in Cortland today to bring about a nomination. There was a stormy session, which adjourned this afternoon with the announcement that the nomination of Mr. Hewitt was unanimous.
